

Insurance Claims Management Services

This fact sheet is for information only. You

Main ideas

- Claims management services can take the hassle out of insurance claims – for a fee.
- Be aware of the risks of using a claims management service before you sign up.
- Free help is available if you want to run the claim yourself.

In this fact sheet:

Insurance claims management services can run your claim – for a fee

Some risks of using a claims management service

Alternatives to a claims management service – running the claim yourself

Insurance claims management services can run your claim – for a fee

When you pay for a claims management service, they will handle your claim for you. This means you can avoid the hassle of dealing with your insurer yourself.

Some risks of using a claims management service

It's important to be aware of the risks of using a claims management service before you sign up. Some risks include:

Questions to ask before signing up

Ask the following questions before you sign up for a claims management service:

Alternatives to a claims management service – running the claim yourself

There are several alternatives to using a claims management service. You can try to run your claim yourself, or you can seek help from a free service.

Need more help?

Visit our Useful Links page for a list of other

Last updated: January 2023